Editorial Review

About the Author

Marti experienced a healing touch from God that delivered her from years of hopelessness because of the childhood abuse she suffered. Since that time, she is better known for her humor and passionate love for Jesus. She enjoys sharing her spiritual walk through teaching and writing with those who have a desire to live a changed life. She is the author of, “The Father Wants to Heal His Little Girls – Letting Go of Childhood Scars” and “Bold Walk, Igniting your Passion and Purpose”. She conducts Women’s Conferences, Mission Outreach programs and is frequently interviewed on various Radio and Television Shows where she is recognized as a community leader. God has given her the ability to speak to all walks of life and address difficult subjects in a light hearted humorous way to keep the truth digestible. Because of her difficult background and deep understanding of those that are hurting she takes time out of her busy schedule to work in inner-cities, prisons and homeless shelters. She travels nationally and internationally conducting conferences to help others overcome hardships in their life She was the 2015 recipient of the Texas Governor’s award for her work with the Criminal Justice system as well as being featured on the front page of the Dallas Morning News. Marti is married with four grown children and is an active member at her home church in North Texas.
