Say Please to the Honeybees By Susan R. Ross

"Say Please to the Honeybees" continues the adventures of Violet, the sheep. Taking honey from the bees without saying "please" lands Violet in a heap of trouble. Violet is plagued by bees seeking comical revenge, spiders wanting tasty treats, a hungry horse, a gaggle of geese and a snippy shopkeeper. Children will love this humorous story with its adorable ending. Read "The Great Bellybutton Cover-up" for more of Violet's hilarious antics. Make a bee. Instructions included. For children ages 4-8.

Editorial Review

From the Author

I wrote SAY PLEASE TO THE HONEYBEES after being approached many times with requests to continue the adventures of Violet the sheep.

But everyone was sooooo fussy. I read my stories in schools before I publish them. I had to change the story countless times because everyone kept saying, "It's too similar to THE GREAT BELLYBUTTON COVER-UP." Finally everyone was satisfied. :)

About the Author

Susan Ross is a Canadian children's author with a unique sense of humour and a background in education. Her delightful stories and the charming illustrations will have children laughing out loud, unaware that they are expanding their vocabulary and improving their social skills. And there's more fun! Craft instructions, included in every book, provide even more entertainment while encouraging creativity and the development of fine motor skills. Even reluctant readers will find these children's books engaging.
