Editorial Review

From Booklist

The intent in this update is to provide generally short selections, culled from popular school library magazines, that reflect current practice. Woolls and Loertscher are internationally known school librarianship educators. Since this is an ALA publication, the articles selected draw from the periodicals of the association and its youth divisions. Two ABC-CLIO periodicals (Woolls is a consulting editor for Libraries Unlimited), Canada's Teacher Librarian (which Loertscher used to edit), a couple of state school library periodicals, and School Library Journal round out the list. Surprisingly, Booklist and VOYA were not included. The 63 articles vary in length from one-half page to seven pages. Most articles are excerpts, although it is not apparent the extent of those selected parts. The articles are clustered into nine topics: the profession, collection development, evaluation, technology, operations, programming (mainly reading promotion), advocacy, underserved populations (mainly students with disabilities), and contemporary issues (mainly legal issues). The volume is more of a sampler than a systematic, exhaustive collection in terms of topics (e.g., one tribute, one author article), but it is disappointing not to see reference-information services, multiculturalism, or more statistics. This one-stop "dip" into school library practice is a fun way to provide a glimpse into some of the writing out there meant to help folks in the field. --Lesley Farmer
